TIPS FOR ONLINE STUDENTS TO WORK SUCCESSFULLY IN VIRTUAL GROUPS

Working in groups for class assignments can sometimes be difficult, especially for the online learner. Follow these useful tips to help guide you into a more successful virtual group dynamic!

When possible, choose group members with similar schedules. Online students reside in different time zones and can have opposing work schedules.

Align group roles and responsibilities with individual strengths and interests.

- Organize
- Research
- Record
- Analyze

Identify what project activities must be accomplished, in what order and by when.

Choose a group leader who is comfortable taking on that role.

Be proactive and begin setting the groundwork early. As online learners, your time is extremely precious.

Communication is key; establish clear guidelines around when, where and how your group will communicate with each other.

Create a comfortable forum to communicate through, even if it’s not the online classroom setting.

Schedule extra conference calls closer to project deadlines to address any last minute hiccups and tasks.

Always be honest, but respectful, in a group. If either the project or a fellow group member is heading down a path you don’t agree with, speak up.

Ask your professor to implement mandatory peer evaluations. This strategy encourages equal participation by ensuring individual accountability.

Don’t be afraid to talk to your professor. Provide regular group updates, which can then be used to track progress and mediate concerns.

HAVING TROUBLE WORKING IN GROUPS?

Brought to you by Drexel.EDU/ONLINE | #ABetterU